New Politics Vol. XVII No. 1, Whole Number 65

From the Editors
Walkouts Teach U.S. Labor a New Grammar for Struggle, Lois Weiner
What’s Left of the Brazilian Left: Reasons for Cautious Optimism from the Landless Workers Movement, Rebecca Tarlau
Special Section: Remembering 1968
1968: The Year of Dangerous Living, Martin Oppenheimer
The Columbia Rebellion (1968), Richard Greeman

Articles
Marxism and Freedom After Sixty Years, For Yesterday and Today, Kevin Anderson
Reconnecting Reform and Revolution: Socialists in the Mist, Michael Hirsch
Black Neighborhoods Matter: An Interview with Lawrence Brown on Community Trauma and Healing, Nicole Fabricant
Battleground Seattle: A Clash of Classes and a Brewing Perfect Storm, Mathieu Dubeau and Lee
Fiorio
- Inequality was Increasing Before Trump, Rick Baum
- Our Passive Society, Chris Wright
- Socialism as Pacifism, Bryant William Sculos
- Libya Under Gaddafi, Clay Claiborne

Words & Pictures
- Political Visual Narrative, Kent Worcester

Reviews
- What I Saw at the (Political) Revolution, Jason Schulman, Review of Heather Gautney, Crashing The Party: From the Bernie Sanders Campaign to a Progressive Movement
- Radical America, Dan Georgakas, Review of Paul Le Blanc, Left Americana: The Radical Heart of US History
- Class Does Matter, Paul Buhle, Review of Steve Fraser, Class Matters: The Strange Career of an American Obsession
- Labor and the South, Martin Comack, Review of Ribas, On the Line: Slaughterhouse Lives and the Making of the New South