New Politics Vol. XVII No. 1, Whole Number 65

From the Editors
Walkouts Teach U.S. Labor a New Grammar for Struggle, Lois Weiner
What’s Left of the Brazilian Left: Reasons for Cautious Optimism from the Landless Workers Movement, Rebecca Tarlau

Special Section: Remembering 1968
• 1968: The Year of Dangerous Living, Martin Oppenheimer
• The Columbia Rebellion (1968), Richard Greeman

Articles
• Marxism and Freedom After Sixty Years, For Yesterday and Today, Kevin Anderson
• Reconnecting Reform and Revolution: Socialists in the Mist, Michael Hirsch
• Black Neighborhoods Matter: An Interview with Lawrence Brown on Commu-nity Trauma and Healing, Nicole Fabricant
• Battleground Seattle: A Clash of Classes and a Brewing Perfect Storm, Mathieu Dubeau and Lee
Fiorio
  • Inequality was Increasing Before Trump, Rick Baum
  • Our Passive Society, Chris Wright
  • Socialism as Pacifism, Bryant William Sculos
  • Libya Under Gaddafi, Clay Claiborne

Words & Pictures
  • Political Visual Narrative, Kent Worcester

Reviews
  • What I Saw at the (Political) Revolution, Jason Schulman, Review of Heather Gautney, Crashing The Party: From the Bernie Sanders Campaign to a Progressive Movement
  • Radical America, Dan Georgakas, Review of Paul Le Blanc, Left Americana: The Radical Heart of US History
  • Class Does Matter, Paul Buhle, Review of Steve Fraser, Class Matters: The Strange Career of an American Obsession
  • Labor and the South, Martin Comack, Review of Ribas, On the Line: Slaughterhouse Lives and the Making of the New South