

Protestors not only demanded that Trump release his tax forms but also to demand greater transparency and a more progressive tax system. Many other issues were raised on placards and from the rally platforms, such as immigrant rights, environmental justice, and the need for single-payer health care.

Democrats of the progressive variety, such as Maxine Waters of California and Jan Schakowsky of Illinois and others, played prominent roles as speakers at rallies. Speaking at a rally Senator Ron Wyden of Oregon, the leading Democrats on the Senate Finance Committee, told the crowd, "It's time to knock off the tax rip offs. No more Cayman Island accounts for the insiders. No more tax breaks for shipping jobs overseas. No more special breaks for Wall Street."