

What happened to the Mexican Electrical Workers Union?

November 12, 2009

Worth listening to: In this podcast from a Canadian radio program, Dan LaBotz discusses the Calderon government's attack on the Mexican Electrical Workers Union, the government's seizure of the Light and Power Company, the liquidation of the company, and the firing of more than 40,000 workers. Dan explains the political context and reasons for the assault on the union and its importance. To hear the interview, go to <http://www.radio4all.net/index.php/program/37203> and click on the arrow in the red circle. The podcast should load.